

Additional Information

My name is Glenn Dewhurst and I am proud to serve as a current councillor for the city of Gosnells. I bring a lifetime of service, including 21 years as a veteran police officer, and now run my own forensic investigations business, delivering accountability and professional outcomes. I am also the founder of the Black Cockatoo Conservation Centre (Kaarakin) and wildlife Australia, protecting our environment and unique wildlife. As a councillor, I have never been afraid to tackle tough issues. I launched the Safe Communities Now program, working with residents, police and agencies to make suburbs safer. I stood up for treasured spaces like Harmony Fields and have driven upgrades to ovals, parks and facilities across every suburb. I am leading the push to complete the Thornlie Bowling Club green covers and the Southerland's Oval redevelopment, including match ready competition lighting and facilities across all our sporting fields.

Looking forward my priorities are clear:

- Build safe secure communities
- Supporting initiatives like castle Law
- Cut more red tape so council is efficient and responsive
- Future proof the city with smart, sustainable planning
- Develop alternative incomes so we don't rely only on rates.
- Support alternative energy use to reduce costs
- Deliver affordable housing for families and young people.
- Maintain the Australian way of life fairness, mateship, opportunity.
- Back local car clubs, sporting activities on reserves, and family events that restore community spirit.

I am also pushing for better mental health services, improved elderly care, and urgent action on social issues facing our children.

I have served on council for 14 years, and I am not finished yet. With your support, I will keep delivering practical solutions, stronger communities, and a safer, healthier, more vibrant future for Gosnells.
